GAJAH, A FORGETFUL ELEPHANT WHOSE INTERESTS INCLUDE SEEING THE WORLD AND DOING AS LITTLE WORK AS POSSIBLE; DUDA, AN OVERLY ENTHUSIASTIC VEGETARIAN ANTEATER; THE QUEEN, A BOSSY TERMITE MONARCH; THE CAPTAIN, A RETIRED MILITARY LEADER IN CHARGE OF DRIVING THE TRAIN; AND JUNIOR, THE QUEEN'S BOOKISH TEENAGE SON.

Despite their big differences this group of characters forms a tight unit. The rhythm is sharp; musicality comes naturally, and at every stop there is something new to discover and a new friend to make. Trunk Train embraces the joy of travelling, getting to know different places and discovering new things. Likewise it embraces the comic misery, as well as the fun, that comes from being cooped up in a confined space with one's nutty family.

Whether it's stopping the train so Gajah can take pictures of the landscape; the Queen can celebrate her birthday or Duda falls off the train, the gang are always curious and eager to explore wherever the train tracks take them.

Trunk Train takes you on a fabulous journey of discovery, replete with comedy, adventure and a dollop of stupidity.

THE EXPLORER INSIDE

Gajah has accidentally swallowed Junior. Can Junior find his way safely out of Gajah's stomach before he gets digested?

THE MAGAZINE

The Queen is dying to make the cover of Bug Monarch Magazine. Gajah is dying to get out of doing any work. So he and Duda set about creating a fake issue of Bug Monarch, full of information about the importance of giving one's colony some time off. Will the Queen spot the fake magazine? Will she ever make the cover of the real one?

HOLE IN THE SKY

Junior gets separated from the others when an eclipse occurs. Without Junior there to explain what's happening, the others think the world is ending. They go through the five stages of grief, culminating in an absurd dance that they believe saves the world. Junior could explain what actually happened, but what's the point?
